Dear Students, Parents, and Supporters of our Students,

Many of you asked about Tuesday's update; no new updates were available at that time. We posted that notice on our webpage that morning. In the future, if you do not receive an update, that means there is no new information. Below is information I would like to share with you today.

Questions and Emails: I, along with many staff, continue to respond to your questions and emails as best as we can. While we may not have all of the answers you are looking for at this time, please know that these questions are important, and help us to frame the FAQs we are developing, as well as inform conversations at the board level.

Continuity of Education: As I've mentioned previously, the College is in the process of developing academic pathways for each student to continue their education in the event the Board votes to close the College. These discussions are ongoing, and are the priority for myself and my leadership team. Should the Board vote to close and makes that announcement, please be advised that academic advising may need some time to review and become familiar with the pathways before meeting with students. Advising appointment slots will be available through Starfish or by emailing the student's advisor. Allowing our advisors this time to process these complex pathways will enable them to provide the best guidance for students.

Continuing through the Spring Semester: I am pleased at our collective efforts to keep our campus safe; our positive test numbers have been low since the start of the semester. I am also grateful to our faculty and staff—many of whom have been at Becker for decades—for their dedicated and unwavering focus on ensuring our students stay focused on their studies through this semester.

Media Coverage: Many of you have read or heard media coverage about Becker—and may have also seen reporters and news crews on our campuses. Consistent with College policy, please continue to reach out to Campus Police (who will inform the Vice President of Communications).

As a reminder, as new information becomes available, it will also be posted on the Becker website, in “Updates from the President.”

Sincerely,

Nancy P. Crimmin, Ed.D.
President
